Our present cities are growing every year... This growth will almost certainly continue and the cities of the future will be much bigger and far more complicated than those of today. Many problems will arise which will have to be solved. The solutions will undoubtedly change the face of the city and the life of the inhabitants... It is quite possible that the future city will have no traffic at all. H.G. Wells in his book The Sleep Awakes, tells of a man who slept for hundreds of years, and awoke to a very different world from that which he knew before. In the streets of that future London there were no animals, carriages, motor-cars, or tramcars. The city was provided with moving roads, and therefore no longer needed the vehicles to which we are accustomed. One side of the road travelled in one direction; the other side moved the opposite way. Anyone who wanted to go to another part of the city stepped on the moving 'way' and sat on one of the seats until he arrived. He did not need to wait for a tramcar or a bus... The moving way was always at his service, always moving silently along, always ready to take him to his destination. That city of the future had no traffic problems. (217 words).

35) Arrange the given sentences in the proper order :

(First and last sentences are in the correct order. The rest of the sentences have to be rearranged so as to give logical sense to the whole passage).
Manners are patterns of behaviour. We have to exercise self-control in order to learn good manners. People respect those who know how to behave well in society. A man of good manners is often considered to be a man of good character with the help of good manners a person can establish lasting friendship with others. A person who is polite, sweet-tempered, and soft-spoken is liked by everybody. By observing small courtesies and acts of politeness, we can encourage others as well as ourselves to be kind in all our dealings.
