There are hundreds of superstitions which survive in various parts of the country, and the study of them is rather amusing. We are told for example that it is unlucky to point to the new moon or to look at it through glass but if we bow nine times to it, we shall have a lucky month. Nearly all superstitions are concerned with "luck". Good luck is associated with black cats, horse shoes, the finding of a pin etc. Ill luck is associated with the howling of dogs, spilling of salt, crossing of knives, walking under a ladder and scores of other things.

Now suppose you tell a scientist that you believe in a certain superstition. Let us say, howling of a dog is a sign of death. The scientist will immediately require evidence before he can accept your belief. He will want figures to prove it. It will be useless quote two or three cases; he will want hundreds. He will want to know (i) if it ever happens that the howling of a dog is not followed by death; (ii) if ever a person's death is predicted by the howling of dogs. The answer to the former question is in the affirmative and the latter in the negative. Your superstition will not bear investigation. It may impress an ignorant person; but it cannot face the light of facts. Your case could not carry conviction in a court of law. Apart from this process of testing by results, any intelligent man will want to know "the reason why". Is there a cause-effect relation between the howling of a dog and a person's death?

35) Arrange the given sentences in the proper order.

(Hint: Sentence 1 and sentence 10 are in the correct order. The rest of the sentences have to be rearranged as so as to give logical sense to the whole passage)

Once upon a time it was difficult to decide whether the royal swan or peacock was the king of the universe. Nor are there any royal swans that swim in the shimmering waters of Mansarovar. And the princesses used to scatter pearls across palace courtyards to tempt their swan lovers. Now, no one knows where Mansarovar is. In those days royal swans used to swim in the lakes that were translucent as white pearls. In our time there are no swan lovers who can be seduced by pearls. They exist only in the world of fables and myths. The lakes are dry, the rivers polluted and the air thick with the dust and smoke of bombs. The royal swans have flown away in search of clear air and pure water. Only the poor ducksand geese have been left behind to bear the burden of our times. (2x15 = 30 Marks)
